STATEMENT OF MOTIVES

Youths are the builders of the social and economic future of our People. Young Puerto Ricans are essential for the sustainable economic development of the Island, because they will be substituting our current workforce and contributing new ideas to the knowledge economy. However, statistics show that Puerto Rico’s youth population has been decreasing dramatically due to the lack of employment opportunities and tax benefits, among other considerations that could encourage them to remain in the Island, build a professional career, and establish their own business.

The Migrant Profile 2012 of the Puerto Rico Institute of Statistics states that the population of Puerto Rico continued to decrease in 2012, just as it happened in the last decade, according to the official annual population estimates of the U.S. Census Bureau. Specifically, seventy-five thousand (75,000) Puerto Ricans approximately have migrated to the United States, of those, 45,707 were persons younger than thirty-five (35) years of age. Likewise, this study updated Puerto Rico’s population projection using as a basis the results of the 2010 Census, which estimated that the Island’s population would decrease gradually within the next forty (40) years, reaching 2.3 million people by 2050.

Certainly, these projections entail serious repercussions for Puerto Rico’s society. Even more so when, according to such projections, the group of the population composed of children younger than fifteen (15) is constantly decreasing and the group composed of persons older than sixty-five (65) will exceed thirty percent (30%) of the population by 2050. Furthermore, said projections indicate that the population between the ages of fifteen (15) and sixty-four (64) shall begin to decrease during this decade. On that note, it is worth quoting an excerpt of the conclusions of the Institute of Statistics:
Migrants became slightly older, more educated, and with a higher income than the previous year. The characteristics of migrants will be a factor in learning about the impact that this demographic dynamic will have on Puerto Rico. It is of utmost importance to identify the opportunities and challenges that this phenomenon will bring about in order to develop the measures that will address the needs of Puerto Rico’s population promptly.

In view of this scenario, which undoubtedly represents a substantial reduction in the working-age population of the Island, and consequently affects the socio-economic future of Puerto Rico, there is an imperative need to take the necessary measures to guarantee the general welfare of future generations and promote a positive social and fiscal long-term impact. Statistical data such as that stated above attests to the urgency with which our young working population must be encouraged to stay and be well-established in the Island. Puerto Rico direly needs its young population to develop professionally and acquire an entrepreneurial sense that shall enable it to contribute to the economic and social development of the Island. For such reason, it is critical to implement initiatives that instill a sense of belonging in our youth and, thus, lead them to contribute to the development of the Island.

Different tax incentives have been established throughout the years which benefit certain industries and sectors in Puerto Rico. Such benefits are necessary to serve justice to various sectors of the population that are facing economic hardships and promote activities that benefit the People in general. Furthermore, the exemptions herein proposed serve to encourage our young professionals to remain in the Island permanently and establish new businesses, thus preventing the flight of young talent that the Island has been experiencing throughout the years.
This legislation offers various competitive advantages for young professionals to work and establish themselves in Puerto Rico. Firstly, full income tax exemption is provided for the first forty thousand dollars ($40,000) earned by young persons between the ages of sixteen (16) and (26) on account of wages, rendered services, or self-employment.

Moreover, this legislation seeks to promote entrepreneurship and business initiatives among our youth. As expressed by Victor Sedov, President of the Center for Entrepreneurship, at the G20 Youth Alliance Summit held in Russia on June 2013:

The current economic crisis is a structural one. Emerging industries require that young people possess new knowledge and entrepreneurial skills. Furthermore, tax and regulatory systems often inhibit business formation by young people. Systemic changes are needed to help the new generation of young entrepreneurs to succeed in the innovative economy of the 21st century.

Likewise, the United States Small Business Administration expressed that reducing taxation on income earned by youth business helps these to survive their first years. France also approved a law known as “L’exonération d’import sur les bénéfices des enterprise nouvelles crees pour les jeunes,” whereby it offers a tax exemption for new businesses created by young individuals during their first years of operation.

The Commonwealth of Puerto Rico has the responsibility to stay abreast of the times and provide workers with the tools needed to ensure the general welfare of the citizens in the long-term. Thus, the intent of this Act is to expedite and facilitate the creation of new businesses by young residents of Puerto Rico for the purpose of promoting economic development, creating new jobs, and fostering a socio-economically secured environment. For such reason, tax incentives are established for any new business fully created by young entrepreneurs, as certified by the Trade and Export Company, during the first three (3) years as of the commencement of their operations in Puerto Rico. Likewise, an innovative financing tool is provided by the Economic Development Bank for Puerto Rico for the creation of a New Business by young entrepreneurs.

The main purpose of this Act is for young Puerto Ricans to be able to use their talent in service of the People of Puerto Rico in exchange for economic incentives that allow them to be established in the Island, buy their first home, and develop a professional career within their social environment. The benefits derived from this legislation exceed the fiscal cost of granting tax exemptions, because it encourages young Puerto Ricans to remain in the Island and contribute with their work and, consequently, with their compensation to Puerto Rico’s economy.

The incentives herein established seek to encourage young citizens to stay in the Island, develop their professional careers, and in turn, promote the socio-economic development of Puerto Rico. This Act is the result of an alliance between the instrumentalities of the Executive Branch of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico in order to implement a mechanism that is consistent with our fiscal reality. It also takes into account the statistics of young professionals who are weighing their option to move from Puerto Rico and offer them a tax benefit package that encourages them to establish in the Island. Hence, the Council on Education of Puerto Rico is hereby directed to require every Institution of Higher Education to furnish the profile data and statistics of its students and graduation candidates every year. Said data shall be used to update the database prepared by the Puerto Rico Institute of Statistics.

This Act further provides for the creation of partnerships among the instrumentalities of the Executive Branch to support Young Entrepreneurs in critical matters such as financing and capital investment. The Department of Economic Development and Commerce, through the Youth Development Program, is charged with the coordination between all public instrumentalities responsible under the provisions of this Act for offering incentives, benefits, and financing in exchange for the commitment of Young Entrepreneurs to establish and develop a business in Puerto Rico. The Economic Development Bank (EDB) shall develop mechanisms to expedite transactions, and grant benefits and financing discounts, and establish special conditions to invest capital specifically geared toward the youth. The above shall ensure that youth businesses have a solid foundation and are successful and sustainable without jeopardizing the financial stability of the Economic Development Bank due to unreasonable risks. As a support measure, government agencies are directed to conduct an inventory of real and personal property that may be assigned to Young Entrepreneurs, subject to effective use criteria, and thus cover all the required aspects of starting and maintaining a successful business operating.

The Legislative Assembly of Puerto Rico, recognizing the dire fiscal situation that the Island is currently undergoing, is responsible for taking the necessary measures to ensure the general welfare of future generations of Puerto Ricans. The emphasis on talent retention is a step in the right direction. The competitive advantages of this Act shall render Puerto Rico into an attractive destination for new generations, regardless of the promise of nominal income made in other jurisdictions.

The people’s demands to be able to live and develop in their birthplace are hereby addressed. In turn, the tools to attract better minds from abroad and promote the Island as a world-class business destination are thus provided.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF PUERTO RICO:

Section 1.- Title
This Act shall be known as the “Young Entrepreneurs Incentive and Financing Act.”
Section 2.- Declaration of Public Policy

It is the public policy of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico to ensure the best interest of the People and promote the adequate and necessary mechanisms to maximize the general welfare of the Island.

Exercising its regulatory power and complying with its duty to ensure the socio-economic wellbeing of the People of Puerto Rico, the Legislative Assembly of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico hereby declares as public policy to incentivize retention of local talent and foster the return of young professionals who have left the Island.

It is the public policy of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico to expedite and facilitate the creation of new business by young residents of Puerto Rico, without impairing constitutional and legal protections for the purpose of promoting economic development, creating jobs, and providing our citizens with a socio-economically secured environment.

Students enrolled in graduate school in an accredited institution outside of Puerto Rico shall be exempt from this residency requirement. However, once they complete their studies, said students shall meet the minimum Puerto Rico residency requirement established. The Economic Development Bank may bring a legal action in accordance with the terms established in the applicable laws, in the event of noncompliance with the terms established herein. In any case, said refinancing shall only be granted when it is part of an application for financing for the development of a business by a Young Entrepreneur and evidence is furnished by the applicant of having received business training courses offered by the Department of Economic Development and/or the Foreign Trade Entrepreneurship Institute of the Trade and Export Company.
